

These rule changes will result in the permanent concentration with a handful of large corporations of the media's ability to guide public opinion. Inevitably, these corporations will become propaganda mouthpieces for the corporate and political interests which provide their profit, while truth and objectivity will be eliminated from our civic discourse.